New Brunswick woman honoured for 40 years of raising funds and awareness for Huntington disease
*Celebrating National Volunteer Week: April 12-18, 2015

(KITCHENER, ON) April 15, 2015 – To celebrate National Volunteer Week (April 12-18), the Huntington Society of Canada (HSC) is honouring Nancie Quigley. Her volunteer work in New Brunswick makes a significant impact in the Huntington’s community. Volunteers are at the heart of HSC. Our volunteers tell a powerful story of caring people who pull together to improve the quality of life for Canadians impacted by Huntington disease (HD).

When Nancie Quigley’s dad was diagnosed with HD, her mother started knocking on doors to raise funds for HSC. For more than 40 years, Nancie has continued that tradition: selling Amaryllis kits, running bingos, campaigning for HealthPartners and organizing a Christmas giftwrapping table at the local mall.

“I’m a volunteer by nature,” says Nancie, “and this is my cause.” After all, she watched her father and sisters slowly die from the genetic disease, and she has nieces and nephews at-risk. Now she’s proud to see succeeding generations take up the torch: her granddaughter recently organized a bake sale for HD.

“Volunteer dedication and support enable us to grow, achieve impactful results and reach our goals,” says Bev Heim-Myers, Chief Executive Officer of the Huntington Society of Canada. “Our inspiration comes from the thousands of volunteers that stand beside us as part of the fabric of the Society and make us the best that we can be.”

The Huntington Society of Canada would like to thank each and every one of our over 10,000 volunteers across the country. Their hard work and dedication is deeply appreciated by the Society.

Now in its 74th year, National Volunteer Week is all about recognizing the hardworking volunteers that make a difference in Canada. It has grown to be the largest celebration of civic participation in Canada. Help us celebrate National Volunteer Week in Canada. Volunteers are part of the ripple effect.

Huntington disease (HD) is a debilitating brain disorder that is fatal and incurable. About one in every 7,000 Canadians has HD and approximately one in every 5,500 is at-risk of developing the disease. Many more are touched by HD whether as a caregiver, a family member, or a friend. HD causes cells in specific parts of the brain to die. As the disease progresses, a person with Huntington’s become less able to manage movements, recall events, make decisions and control emotions. The disease leads to incapacitation and, eventually, death.

The Huntington Society of Canada (HSC) is a respected leader in the worldwide effort to end Huntington disease. HSC is the only Canadian health charity dedicated to providing help and hope for families dealing with Huntington disease across Canada.
